Sharon Szymanski taught voice at UNC-CH for seven years before opening her own studio in Chapel Hill. Formerly the Associate Director of the Delaware Music School, she received her vocal training at Miami University (OH), UNC-CH, and Meredith College.

Her performing resume includes over 60 roles in theater, musical theater and opera, as well as solo appearances in recital, concerts and oratorios. In 2004 she premiered Mark Glick's "The Wife of Bath", winner of the NATS national art song competition at the group's national conference.

Ms. Szymanski is a member of the Durham Music Teachers Association and the Chapel Hill Music Teachers Association, the Executive Board of NCMTA and the Executive Board of NC National Association of Teachers of Singing. She recently was selected to give her presentation "Expanding the Private Voice Studio" at the 2006 NATS National conference in Minneapolis, and has spoken at various other professional meetings in the southeast region.
